High Court

➤ India has a single judiciary, but from the perspective of hierarchical levels, the Constitution has divided the judiciary into three parts:

- ✓ National Level: Supreme Court

- ✓ State Level: High Court

- ✓ District Level: Subordinate Courts

➤ The concept of a single judiciary means that the decision of each court is not limited to its own jurisdiction but applies to the entire territory of India.

➤ During the British period, the first three High Courts were established in 1862 at Calcutta, Bombay, and Madras.

➤ In 1866, the Allahabad High Court was established.

➤ At the time of India's independence in 1947, the total number of High Courts was 11.

➤ Part VI (Articles 214–231) of the Indian Constitution deals with High Courts.

➤ Article 214 – There shall be a High Court for each state.

- ✓ The 7th Amendment (1956) provided that a single High Court can serve two or more states jointly.

➤ Currently, there are 7 common High Courts.

1. Bombay High Court: Maharashtra, Goa, Dadra & Nagar Haveli, Daman & Diu
2. Madras High Court: Tamil Nadu, Puducherry
3. Guwahati High Court: Nagaland, Assam, Mizoram, Arunachal Pradesh (geographically the largest)
4. Jammu & Kashmir High Court: Jammu & Kashmir, Ladakh
5. Kerala High Court: Kerala, Lakshadweep
6. Calcutta High Court: West Bengal, Andaman & Nicobar Islands
7. Chandigarh High Court: Haryana, Punjab, Chandigarh

➤ Meghalaya, Manipur, and Tripura were earlier under the Guwahati High Court, but currently, each has its own separate High Court.

➤ The 25th High Court was established in 2019 at Amaravati (Andhra Pradesh).

➤ The constitution of a High Court is done by Parliament from time to time.

➤ Parliament can also extend the jurisdiction of any High Court.

➤ Delhi and Jammu & Kashmir have High Courts only for Union Territories.

➤ Article 217 – Deals with the appointment of judges in the High Court.

- ✓ Consultation with Governors:

- ✓ While appointing High Court judges, the President consults the Governor of the respective state.

- ✓ If a High Court has jurisdiction over two or more states, the President consults all the concerned Governors.

- ✓ Consultation with Chief Justice:

- ✓ The President also consults the Chief Justice of the High Court being appointed. This is explicitly mentioned in the Constitution.

- ✓ Collegium System (Post-1993):
 - ✓ Following a 1993 judicial decision, the President began consulting the Chief Justice of India and three senior Supreme Court judges before making appointments.
 - ✓ This procedure is known as the Collegium System, which plays a key role in judicial appointments and transfers in India.
 - In 1998, the number of members in the collegium increased to five, which continues to this day.
 - The collegium is mentioned neither in the Constitution nor in any parliamentary act. It originated through judicial decisions.
 - The 99th Constitutional Amendment in 2014 attempted to abolish the collegium system and established a six-member Judicial Appointments Commission to advise the President on judicial appointments.
 - However, in 2015, a Constitution Bench declared this commission unconstitutional.
 - As a result, the collegium system was reinstated.
 - ✓ Decisions of the High Court will be used as evidence by subordinate courts.
 - ✓ By “court records,” it is meant that subordinate courts will not deliver any decision that contradicts the rulings of the High Court.
 - Article 216 – Constitution of High Court:
 - ✓ It is constituted by the Parliament, and its jurisdiction is also determined by the Parliament.
 - Article 217 – Appointment and Qualifications of Judges
 - ✓ There are only two qualifications to become a High Court judge:
 1. Must be a citizen of India
 2. Must have either served as a judge in any judicial position for 10 years or practiced as an advocate in one or more High Courts for 10 years
 - Article 218 – Application of Provisions of Supreme Court and High Courts
 - Article 219 – Oath:
 - ✓ The Governor of the respective state administers the oath.
 - ✓ The oath is mentioned in the Third Schedule of the Constitution.
 - ✓ When a judge is transferred, they do not need to take the oath again.
 - Article 220 – After serving as a High Court judge, one cannot practice as an advocate.
 - This provision is made to maintain the independence of the judiciary.
 - ✓ The Parliament determines the salaries and allowances from time to time, which are charged on the consolidated fund of the state.
 - ✓ In the case of a common High Court, the President decides how much salary will be paid from each state.
 - ✓ To maintain the independence of the judiciary, no reduction can be made in their salaries and allowances except during a financial emergency.
 - Article 222 – The President, in consultation with the Supreme Court, can transfer a High Court judge from one High Court to another.
 - ✓ Currently, the President transfers judges based on the recommendation of the collegium, even though the collegium is not mentioned in the Constitution.
 - ✓ For example, the transfer of Justice CS Karnan was highly controversial. He accused the collegium of making transfers based on caste and corruption.
 - ✓ As a result, the Supreme Court held him guilty of contempt of court and sentenced him to six months' imprisonment.

- Article 223 – Appointment of Acting Chief Justice
 - ✓ When the post of Chief Justice in a High Court becomes vacant, the President appoints an Acting Chief Justice, who is called the Executive Chief Justice.
 - ✓ There is no provision for appointing temporary judges in High Courts (unlike in the Supreme Court, where it is done to complete the quorum).
 - Article 224 – Provision for Appointment of Additional/Temporary Judges
 - ✓ A judge of a subordinate court who is qualified to become a High Court judge can be appointed as an Acting Judge of the High Court for two years with the prior approval of the President.
 - ✓ During this period, the judge receives the salary and allowances of a High Court judge.
 - ✓ This period cannot be extended beyond two years.
 - Article 225 – Jurisdiction
 - ✓ For example, if an incident occurs in Rajasthan, the jurisdiction will lie with the Rajasthan High Court, regardless of the citizenship of the person involved.
 - Article 226 – High Court can issue Writs
 - ✓ The Constitution mentions five writs, but in practice, High Courts have also started issuing petitions called interim relief (injunctions).
 - ✓ The writs are: Habeas Corpus – Protection of personal liberty
 - ✓ Mandamus – Command to perform a duty
 - ✓ Prohibition – Stop lower courts from exceeding jurisdiction
 - ✓ Certiorari – Quash orders of lower courts
 - ✓ QuoWarranto – Question the authority of a person holding office
 - ✓ Interim Relief – Temporary relief granted by the court
 - ✓ Since High Courts can issue six types of petitions, their jurisdiction is considered broader.
 - ✓ High Courts can issue writs for both fundamental rights and legal rights, whereas the Supreme Court issues writs only for fundamental rights.
 - According to Article 226(A), a writ cannot be issued against a parliamentary law, meaning the validity of a parliamentary enactment cannot be challenged through a writ.
 - ✓ Instead, a separate Constitution Bench of the Supreme Court is constituted to decide on such matters.
 - Article 227 – Superintendence and Control over Subordinate Courts by High Court
 - ✓ Article 233 states that the Governor of a state shall appoint judges of subordinate courts in consultation with the High Court.
 - Article 228 – A High Court can call for a case from a subordinate court and decide it, or give directions to return it to the subordinate court.
 - Article 229 – Recruitment of staff and servants of High Courts is done by the High Court itself, and their salaries and allowances are charged on the state's consolidated fund.
 - Article 230 – Parliament can also establish High Courts in Union Territories.
 - Article 231 – A single High Court can serve two or more states.

Rajasthan High Court

- Establishment: 29 August 1949, at Jodhpur.
- The High Court was inaugurated by Sawai Man Singh II. The first Chief Justice was Kamal Kant Verma (a judge from Allahabad High Court), and 11 other judges were sworn in.
- Current strength: 49 judges + 1 Chief Justice = 50 judges.
- At the time of Independence, Rajasthan had 5 High Courts – Jaipur, Jodhpur, Bikaner, Udaipur, and a bench in Kota; a total of 20 judges were working in Alwar.

- Under the Rajasthan High Court Ordinance, 1949, a High Court was established at Jodhpur, and all five predecessor princely state High Courts were abolished.
 - After the Constitution came into effect (26 Jan 1950), the first Chief Justice of Rajasthan High Court was Justice Kailash Nath Vachoo, who became the longest-serving Chief Justice of Rajasthan High Court.
 - The shortest-serving Chief Justice was Satish Mittal, who served 41 days.
 - On 1 Nov 1956, a bench was established in Jaipur, with 5 judges appointed.
 - The Satyanarayan Rao Committee recommended the abolition of this temporary bench, and it was abolished in 1958.
 - Using powers under Section 51(2) of the State Reorganization Act, 1956, the President ordered the establishment of a permanent bench in Jaipur on 8 Dec 1976.
 - The Jaipur bench started functioning on 31 Jan 1977.
 - The new building of Jodhpur High Court was inaugurated on 7 Dec 2019 by then President Ram Nath Kovind.
 - Chief Justices of Rajasthan High Court who became Chief Justices of the Supreme Court:
 - KN Vachoo
 - JS Verma
 - Rajendra Mal Lodha (a resident of Jodhpur) – the only Rajasthan HC judge who became Chief Justice of India.

Local Self-Government

- Local Self-Government includes the administration of both villages and towns.
- Village administration is called Panchayati Raj.
- Urban administration is called Municipal Administration.
- In India, the father of local self-government is considered to be Viceroy Lord Ripon, who enacted the Local Self-Government Act in 1882, also referred to as the Magna Carta of local self-government.
- Local self-government is a subject in the State List, so state governments can determine Panchayati Raj and urban administration according to their preference.
- The philosophical father of Panchayati Raj in India is Mahatma Gandhi, as Panchayati Raj is influenced by his idea of Gram Swaraj.
- Gandhi outlined four levels of Gram Swaraj:
 - Nation ↑ District ↑ Taluka ↑ Village
- According to Gandhi, each level should be autonomous, and power should flow from the bottom to the top.
- Dr. BR Ambedkar believed that villages had high untouchability, and implementing Panchayati Raj could lead to further exploitation of Dalits.
- Therefore, the Indian Constitution included Panchayati Raj in Part IV under Article 40, which is non-mandatory.
- Because Panchayati Raj was included in Part IV, states neglected it and did not hold elections for a long time.

Community Development Program

- Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru implemented this program on 2nd October 1952 to effectively put Gandhi's ideas of Gram Swaraj (village self-rule) into practice.
- In practice, the program was influenced by America's Ford Foundation programs, which inspired Nehru.

- The program introduced the post of Block Development Officer (BDO), which today functions as the Executive Officer of the Panchayat Samiti.
 - The Community Development Program was India's first and largest rural development initiative.
 - After five years, it was observed that the program failed to achieve its objectives.
 - Consequently, Pt. Nehru acknowledged the program's failure and appointed the Balwant Rai Mehta Committee to review and suggest improvements.
 - National Extension/Dissemination Program
 - ✓ This program started in 1953, with the main objective of increasing public participation in rural development plans.
 - ✓ However, this program also ended in failure.

Balwant Rai Mehta Committee (1957)

- They were also members of the Constituent Assembly.
- They made the following recommendations:
 - A three-tier Panchayati Raj system should be introduced:
 - Zilla Parishad (District Council)
 - Panchayat Samiti (Block-level Council)
 - Gram Panchayat (Village Council)
 - States with a population of less than 15 lakh may adopt a two-tier system.
 - One-third (33%) reservation should be provided for women.
 - Panchayati Raj should be given legal status.
 - Panchayati Raj institutions should be provided financial autonomy, and their sources of revenue should be increased.
- In January 1958, the National Development Council accepted the recommendations of Balwantrai Mehta, and the three-tier model was adopted in most states of India.
- Hence, Balwantrai Mehta is also called the architect or craftsman of Indian Panchayati Raj.
- Balwantrai Mehta passed away in a plane crash during the India-Pakistan war.
- On 2 October 1959, Jawaharlal Nehru formally inaugurated the Panchayati Raj at Bagadri (Nagaur, Rajasthan).
- Rajasthan became the first state to implement Panchayati Raj.
- On 11 October 1959, the formal inauguration of Panchayati Raj was held in Mahbubnagar district, Andhra Pradesh, making Andhra Pradesh the second state to implement it.
- Andhra Pradesh was the first state to conduct Panchayati Raj elections (1959).
- Rajasthan held its first Panchayati Raj elections in 1960.

Ashok Mehta Committee (1977)

- Prime Minister Morarji Desai constituted this committee in December 1977.
- The committee submitted its report in August 1978.
- However, due to the fall of Morarji Desai's government, its recommendations were not implemented.
- The committee made the following suggestions:
 1. Suggested a two-tier Panchayati Raj system:
 - Zilla Parishad (District Council)
 - Mandal Panchayat – covering a population of 15,000–20,000
 2. Abolish the Panchayat Samiti and Gram Panchayat.
 3. Mandal Panchayat to replace them: larger than a Gram Panchayat but smaller than a Panchayat Samiti, covering a population of 15,000–20,000.

4. Elections to Panchayati Raj bodies should be conducted on a party-based system.
 - Zilla Parishad (District Council) and Panchayat Samiti elections are conducted on a party-based system.
 - Gram Panchayat elections are non-party based (independent candidates contest).
 5. Gram Panchayat elections should not be conducted on a party basis to maintain social harmony in the village.
